MEETING OF DISTRICT
No. 24 I. O. O. F. HELD HERE

Faced by possibly the largest gathering of members at such a meeting, Bros. L. D'Albertanson, of Chauvin, D.D.G.M., of District No. 24, I.O.O.F., presided on Monday night, when business pertaining to this territory filled the agenda.

During the evening, Bro. A. E. May, P.G.M., representing the Grand Master of the jurisdiction, gave an interesting and instructive address to those present.

Before adjourning, election of officers for next year saw Bro. T. Lissimore and Bro. A. Sawers elevated to the position of D.D.G.M. and district secretary respectively.

A splendid lunch was served at the close and speeches were heard from a number of those attending from Irma and Chauvin as well as the Wainwright brothers.

BIG BANK ROBBERY IS FILM FEATURE

NEXT WEEK ELITE SHOWS CROOK STORY BY UNIVERSAL

The most intimate crook story ever filmed is the treat in store for the patrons of the Elite theatre with the showing of Universal's outstanding photoplay, "Outside the Law" on Mon., Tues., and Wed. next week.

The story revolves around the robbery of a large metropolitan bank by a crafty cracksman and the complications resulting in his refusal to split fifty-fifty with a gang leader. The action moves swiftly and builds up to one of the most dramatic climaxes ever brought to the screen.

Universal has selected a superb cast to portray the characters in the story. Mary Nolan, ever a splendid emotional actress, is said to give her most finished performance in "Outside the Law" as the accomplice of the crook, Fingers, played by Owen Moore. Edward G. Robinson, as the gang leader, "Cobra" Collins, a distinctive underworld character, a Chinese-American, in this new film drama and Owen Moore is seen as Fingers, a bank robber as cunning as a cat.

The screen play has been adapted from the original story written by Tod Browning. Browning also directed the photoplay.

Although the plot deals principally with the professional activities of crooks, the emotional human side of the cracksman, and his accomplice and a jealous rival are well brought out in this absorbing drama.

OBITUARY

JAMES HENRY WADE

A former resident of Wainwright, in the person of Mr. James Henry Wade, passed away on Wednesday at his residence in Edmonton after a long illness at the age of 69 years.

The late Mr. Wade will be remembered as one of the employees of the C.N.R. at this point, and the sympathies of a large number of friends and acquaintances will go out to the sorrowing widow in her bereavement.

In addition there are left to mourn, three sons—Bernard, of Bymoore, Alta., George, of Paisley, Scotland, and Donald T. (formerly on the Royal Bank staff here) of Edmonton. Two sisters also survive the deceased, both these being in England.

The funeral took place on Saturday in Edmonton.

In connection with Remembrance Day, a solemn requiem mass for deceased soldiers killed in the Great War will be sung at St. Lake's church at 9 a.m. on Wednesday morning, when the sermon will be preached by Rev. Chas. Keenan, of Spruce Grove.

OPTIMISM VOICED BY BESSBOROUGH

GOV.-GENERAL DEPRECATES PROPHECIES OF WORST THINGS TO COME

MONTREAL—"Keep faith, guard the great and fundamental asset of character of the people and the future will take care of itself. Only transmit to your children the faith in Canada and Canadians that you fathers bequeathed to you and the walls of your house are secure."

In these and similar words the Earl of Bessborough, Governor-General of Canada, counselled the Canadian Club of Montreal against accepting the judgment of certain "prophets" that far worse things were waiting round the next corner.

"If I may be permitted to give you a word of advice," his excellency said "it is that you pay a minimum of attention to such "South sea bubble" speculation about what may or may not happen in the future, and concentrate your energies on what has got to be done in the present.

"Times are bad, I quite agree; but sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof. And I, for one, am convinced that times would already be appreciably less bad if a large number of people with more imagination than judgment had not contracted the morbid habit of proclaiming that there are far worse things waiting for us round the next corner.

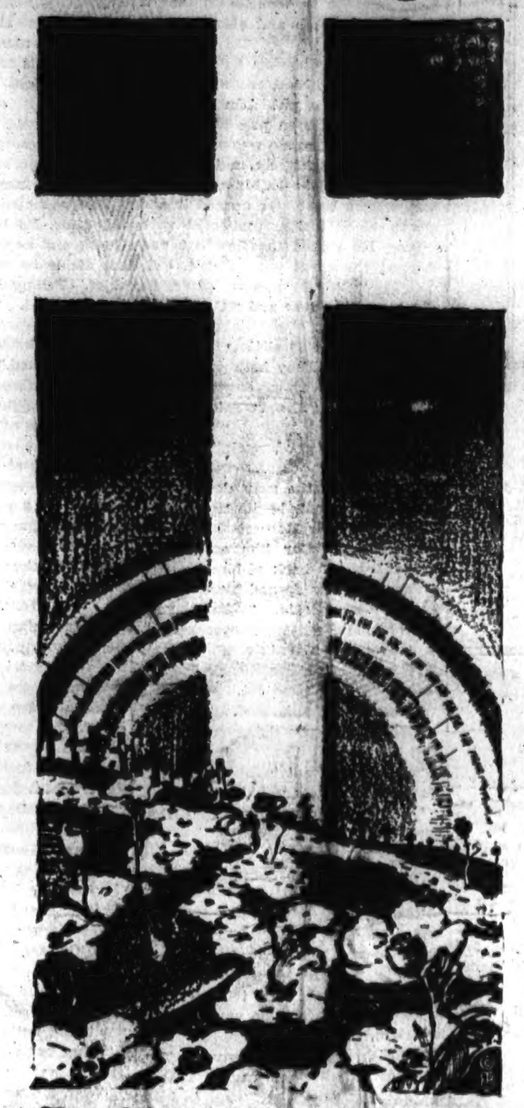

"It is notorious that when a man's vitality is low he is an easy prey for any wandering germ; so too, when the world's vitality is low, it is dangerously liable to become infected by the sinister microbe of rumor, false prophesy and defeatism.

"Please do not think that I incline toward the facile and haphazard optimism which pretends that all is for the best in this best of all possible words. I am not suggesting that our troubles can be dismissed with some such simple formula as "if only we all pull together, every thing will come right. That attitude is as dangerous as the other.

"Our troubles are very real and to overcome them will test the very foundations, the very genius of our civilization."

Miss Lillian Heffernan who has been nursing north of Edmonton is visiting her parents for a short time.

Lest We Forget !

In Flanders' Fields

In Flanders' Fields the poppies grow, between the crosses, row on row
That mark our place. And in the sky the larks, still bravely singing fly
Scarce heard among the guns below.
We are the dead. Short days ago we lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow;
Loved and were loved. And now we lie
In Flanders' Fields.

Take up the quarrel with the foe: To you, with failing hands, we throw
The torch. Be yours to lift it high. If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep though poppies blow
In Flanders' Fields.

COL. M. ROGERS AGAIN JASPER PK. SUPERINTENDENT

Appointment of Colonel Maynard Rogers to be superintendent of Jasper National Park, Alta., is announced. He succeeds R. H. Knight, whose death took place several weeks ago.

For several years Colonel Rogers was superintendent of Jasper, but was transferred to the head office of the Dominion parks branch and his place taken by Mr. Knight. In proceeding again to Jasper the colonel resumes duties which have long been familiar to him.

Colonel Rogers is a well-known figure in military circles and in 1928 commanded the Canadian Bisley team.

RATIFY SALE OF SOUTH OIL REFINERY

MAPLE LEAF COMPANY PAY HALF MILLION DOLLARS FOR PROPERTY

LETHBRIDGE—At a largely attended meeting of the Maple Leaf Oil and Refinery Company, Ltd., the shareholders ratified the sale of company's undertakings to the Maple Leaf Petroleum, Ltd., for that purpose.

The company is said to be well backed financially and the introduction of new outside capital into the province at this time is another evidence of the faith of oil men in the future of the industry in Alberta, it is stated.

The leading figure in the new company is John P. Akolt, of Denver, Colo., who has long been associated with the oil business in Colorado and other Rocky Mountain states. While actual figures are not available, it is understood the purchase price is upward of half a million dollars cash.

REMEMBRANCE DAY

Thirteen years ago today (Nov. 11th, 1918) the "Cease Fire" sounded on the Western Front, and the war-wary people of the world found a respite from the horrors they had suffered for over four and a-quarter years.

Since then that day has lived in our memories, and with the passing of time has become more and more sacred as well as historical.

For many years a proper observance of the day, in a manner befitting its significance, has become more and more difficult owing to the impossibility of securing a general suspension of business, whereby all might gather and take part in the ceremonies appropriate to the day. At last that difficulty has been overcome by the passage of the Act of Parliament whereby the Eleventh of November each year is forever a national holiday under the title of "Remembrance Day."'

'And, too, while we remember and reverence the memory of those who paid the supreme sacrifice that justice and right should not perish from the earth, may we also not forget the living; those who were spared us by an ALL-wise Providence, yet in very many cases in such condition as to need our help for the rest of their lives. Torn and maimed, blind and deaf, gassed and broken. Seeking not for themselves, but in some instances for their loved ones—their dependents.

And thus while we pay tribute to those who "went west" may we also recognize and assist the living by wearing that noble symbol of sacrifice—the replica of that emblem of the blood-red fields of Flanders.

Buy a poppy—Lay your wreath at the memorial—remember the dead—But help the living!

REBEKAHS HOLD GALA NIGHT AND INITIATION

The members of Adeline Lodge, I.O.O.F. held a big night on Thursday last, when three new members were initiated into the beautiful mysteries of that branch of Oddfellowship. A large number of members from other points were on hand to witness the ceremony, even Calgary being represented at the doings. At the close of lodge, the "eats" committee proved their worth in the preparing of a truly sumptuous supper to which all did ample justice. Preparations are under way for another big night on Thursday of next week when the Fifteenth anniversary of the local lodge is to be fittingly celebrated.

FEDERAL HOUSE TO MEET JANUARY FIRST

PREPARING NOW FOR NEXT SESSION DOMINION PARLIAMENT

OTTAWA—Unless the indisposition of the prime minister and the possibility of his being induced to take a vacation, prove a delaying influence, the present prospects are that the session of parliament will be called for the last week of January.

To that end, certain preparations are being made. The last session, which began only in March and lasted into August, proved a laborious affair, made more so by the heat. It is planned to begin earlier and, presumably, to end earlier next time.

The particular reason for expedition, however, would be the Imperial conference. No one here is able to figure out how it can possibly occur before June. It could not synchronize with the meeting of parliament here, though such conferences have been carried on in London when Parliament was sitting.

Grizzly Bear Meeting Sees Much Business

APPLICATION FOR OLD AGE PENSION IS ENDORSED BY COUNCIL

A meeting of the Council of the Municipal District of Grizzly Bear, No. 452, was held at Wildmere on Monday, Nov. 2nd, Reeve Shane taking the chair.

Minutes of previous meeting were read, and on motion approved.

Messrs. R. Tessman and W. Crocker of Tp. 49-5 waited on the Council regarding roadwork, and had settlement as to a road deviation on the east of 12-49-5.

Memo submitted, advised the appointment of J. W. Reid as Sec.-treas. for White Cloud school district.

A letter from Wainwright municipal hospital advised that in future the hospital charge for indigents would be $1 per day in place of the $1.50 on the hospital agreement.

Memo submitted from Can. Bank of Commerce regarding the financial problems confronting the Council.

A notice from the debt adjustment director, notified the Council that a ratepayer in range five had been granted a certificate under the act.

The application of Mr. F Wright for an old age pension was endorsed by the Council.

Request of the C.P.R. for settlement for land required for roadway between sections 15 and 22 in 48-5 was under review, and after discussion on motion of Councillors Nichol and Freidland it was agreed to close this road.

Visit of municipal department inspector to the office was reported, also of road-inspector Morrison, when going over roads subject to provincial road grant.

A request from school district to be supplied with details of each ratepayers' tax arrears was not entertained.

Road work sheets were submitted from Divisions 1, 2, 3, 4, & 5 and approved.

Accounts submitted and passed were:

Mothers' Allowance	$57.00
Mrs. I. Brown	15.00
Mrs. A. Madill	9.00
S. E. Purser	7.40
A. M. Nichol	5.40

Dept. of Mun. Affairs	136.35
O. H. Webber	2.35
W. A. Easton	3.10
A. H. Ford	10.25
West. Municipal News	18.65

The meeting then adjourned.

RETAIL BUSINESS SHOWS INCREASE

DOMINION STATISTICS BUREAU REPORT INDICATES SHARP RISE IN SALES

OTTAWA—The marked upward trend in Canadian business was noted in the value of retail sales during September, issued in a report by Dominion statistics.

In the boot and shoe group, retail sales rose from the index of 79.1 in August, to 85.9 in September, while the increase in clothing was even more marked, rising from 67.7 to 84.1. An almost similar increase was indicated in furniture, the figure for August being 67.3, and for September 84.8 while general and departmental store business increased from the index of 99.9 to 113.1.

The combined index number for all groups rose from 92.1 in August to 99.2 in September. If lower price levels are taken into consideration, says the bureau's report, the rise in retail sales in September of this year over August was eight per cent as compared with five per cent in 1930.

STEWART DEFENDS LIBERALS ACTION

EX-MINISTER TELLS EDMONTON AUDIENCE BEAUHARNOIS GOOD BARGAIN FOR CANADA

EDMONTON, Nov. 5—Strong defence of the record of the former Liberal government in connection with the Beauharnois power project was made by Hon. Charles Stewart M.P., ex-minister of the interior, when addressing the Edmonton East Mackenzie King Club which tendered him a banquet Wednesday evening in the Masonic Temple.

No defence could be set up for the actions of Senator McDougall, who had figured prominently in the investigation, said the ex-minister. No one wished to attempt such a defence. Hon. Mr. Stewart said he had been told by Senator Haydon that he did not know certain campaign contributions had come from Beauharnois. The campaign funds of the party had been handled by Senator Haydon who had no knowledge concerning the contributors.

It was pointed out by Hon. Mr. Stewart that the Beauharnois power project had nothing whatever to do with campaign funds. He considered that the agreement between the company and the federal government over the canal project, which was to be free for public use for 72 years, was a good bargain for the people of Canada.

Mr. John Davis, of Auburndale, can sure grow "murphies" and to prove it he brought The Editor three beauties which together tipped the scales at nine pounds seven and a-half ounce (9 lbs. 7½ oz.). And they cooked like balls of flour too!

PLEASANT GATHERING AT BATTLE HEIGHTS

A well-patronized whist drive and dance was held at Battle Heights school on Friday evening last, when a real enjoyable time was spent; the proceeds being to aid the Anglican church of that district. The winners at cards were—Ladies: Mrs. R. Hendon, Mrs. H. Walker and Mrs. C. Cole. Gents: Messrs. T. Saunders, W. Grey and Mr. LaPalm. Those responsible extend thanks for the hearty support accorded the affair.

Quite a number of local basketball fans journeyed to the city on Saturday to see The Commercial Grads in action.

WORLD WHEAT FAIR POSTPONED A YEAR

EXHIBITION & CONFERENCE TO BE HELD IN REGINA, CANADA, IN 1933

REGINA, Saskatchewan, Canada—As a result of the world-wide depression and the desire of governments everywhere to economize, the Government of Canada has postponed until the summer of 1933 the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference which was to have been held in Regina next year. Plans for the show were started more than two years ago and exhibits were expected from more than two score countries.

The Canadian organization, which has the backing of the Federal Government, will be continued, and it is believed that with an extra year of preparation the fair will be even more representative of the world's progress in grain culture than would have been the case next year. The Prince of Wales had been invited to open the exhibition in 1932, and no doubt the invitation will be renewed for the year following.

A fine large building has been erected on the grounds of the Regina Exhibition Association to house the grain exhibition and the conference of world experts. The huge structure has a main unit 640 feet long and 120 feet wide, with two wings, each 300 feet wide. Altogether there is a floor space of approximately 150,000 square feet in which 75,000 persons standing could be accommodated in comfort.

Prize money offered for world competition in cereals amounts to over 40,000 pounds of which 16,500 pounds is for wheat alone.

3 cups rolled oats
2½ cups flour
3 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup brown sugar
½ cup lard
½ cup butter
½ cup milk

Put rolled oats into a bowl. Sift flour, baking powder and salt and sugar together; add to oats. Melt butter and lard, add to dry mixture with milk. Mix all together, roll, cut with round cutter and bake in moderate oven.

Fill with following mixture: 1 pound chopped dates, 1 cup brown sugar, 1 cup hot water. Cook well and put between cookies.

Or finish cookies as illustrated. Have filling ready when you make cooky dough; when cookies are shaped with small cutter, cut centres from half the round; place a spoonful of the thick date filling on uncut rounds, put the open ones over the filling, pinch edges together well and bake at moderate heat.

MONTREAL WILL USE TELEVISION

Construction of the Dominion's first television station was well under way this past week with the arrival in Montreal of Armondo Conto, engineer of the Western Television Corporation, Chicago, from which La Presse Publishing Company has purchased the apparatus.

Thirty to sixty days will be required for the completion of La Presse's television station, according to Clem F. Wade, president of Western Television Corporation. It will operate on 2050 kilocycles with 500 watts of power which is ample, he says, for pictures to be received by a large proportion of the population of Canada. Since television waves do not stop at international boundaries Montreal pictures will also be seen in New York and the New England states.

An Original Novel of Canada ⁘ An Epic of 2024 A.D.

By Ralph Huntingford

ed to be winding it up. From this McLeod came to the conclusion that it was a time bomb and also time for him to act.

Making this decision, he leaped on the man from behind, and with a blow behind the ear, put him down as though he had been pole axed. Making sure that the man was out he picked up the box, gingerly, and saw that he had been right in his surmise. It was a time bomb. He opened it and saw a clock inside, connected with a fuse. He ripped the fuse out and stopped the clock with a nail. Putthe bomb in a safe place, he shouldered the man and set off to Sir Herbert's office.

Sir Herbert was sitting talking to Van de Quirk. They both jumped up as he entered with his burden.

"You got him then?" said Sir Herbert.

"Good work, good work," rumbled Van de Quirk.

McLeod set the man down in a chair. He was now beginning to show signs of life. Sir Herbert was saying "We must question him and try to find out who is back of him."

The man now opened his eyes and Van de Quirk said, "What's your name?" His glittering eyes seemed to transform him into a veritable devil, and the captive shrank back as though he had been hit.

"Oswald," he answered.

"What were you doing round the well tonight?"

"Nothing, I went to look for a letter that I lost there today."

"What were you doing with that bomb then?"

"I found it and was looking to see what it was when someone jumped me."

"That sounds reasonable enough," said Van de Quirk. "It' circumstantial evidence but hardly enough to hold him on. McLeod only saw him with it and could not tell precisely what he was doing. Do you want to hold him, Sir Herbert?"

"Hold him!" I should say so. The first man that we've caught in the act and you ask "Do I want to hold him? I don't believe a word he says and a few strokes of the lash in Wainwright jail will soon loosen his tongue I'll bet. Who are you working for?" the man.

'I'm not talking," he answered.

"Won't talk eh? you'll soon talk, I'll be bound. I'll have him held till Browning comes. He knows a thing or two about making people talk."

Just at this moment the lights flickered and went out, immediately a piercing scream rang out through the office. McLeod, who had jumped toward the prisoner to prevent his escape, heard a swish and then a thud as though something had struck human flesh. He clutched at the man and as he did so, the lights came on again, and he found himself holding a dead man, a knife had pierced his heart.

"Who did that?" he at last managed to gasp out. Neither answered him as they looked from one to the other. Van de Querk then pointed and said, "The window, look, it's open, it was shut."

McLeod glanced at the dead man and saw that he had been facing the window. Somebody outside had killed him.

"To shut his mouth I suppose," he muttered to himself. "I heard the knife pass me as I jumped. It nearly got me, I guess.

"Well, it's no use looking for them outside in the dark. They have too good a start," said Van de Querk. "There may be footprints outside but I doubt it.. It's been freezing all day."

McLeod had taken off the man's ring and looking at it said. "This man is number eight, Chowitsky is number six, Browning said that the man I killed was number five. That is two dead and one known. I wonder how many more there are. I sure would like to know who number one is." What shall I do with this Sir Herbert?"

"We will send him to Wainwright perhaps he can be identified. I wonder who opened the window. Did you hear anyone chief?"

"No! I was standing between it and the door, as you may remember, when the lights went out, but whoever did it was pretty handy at throwing a knife. I guess we might as well get rid of that hombre and then turn in. If you find anything else you let me know McLeod. I told you not to work alone," he continued to lay down the law as they lugged the dead man away.

The next two or three days were quiet. A few minor mishaps occurred but nothing serious. Then the mysterious stranger appeared again. McLeod had been searching diligently for Chowitsky but had failed to locate him. Then he was sent to Wainwright with some drill-bits and while there was called to the Radiograph. It was the masked man again who said, "The bunkhouse is to be set on fire at two o'clock tonight." Then he disconnected.

McLeod returned to his work thinking this message over. Some scores of men would be sleeping in the building and he must do something about it. It was too risky to handle alone this time. He had better get Van de Querk and as soon as he got back to the fields he went in search of the chief. Telling him his news Van de Querk asked, "What was this man like?"

"I don't know, I have never seen him unmasked."

"Well McLeod, we must stop this business tonight. I am flying to Edmonton this afternoon but shall be back this evening. Do not come to see me, but at one o'clock go to the bunkhouse and keep watch. I will come with a gang of men and we'll make short work of the lot this time Keep your eyes open for my crowd."

McLeod then went to tell Sir Herbert what was on that night.

CHAPTER THREE

At ten minutes to one o'clock, McLeod made his way to the bunkhouse and picking a spot beside an outhouse sheltered from the wind, he began another weary vigil. One-thirty passed and he saw no sign of the Chief or his men. At one forty-five a man started out from the bunkhouse so he went to investigate. As he moved from concealment several men jumped on him from the shadows, and showered blows on his head. Fighting bravely and striving in vain to retain consciousness, he had a vague idea that he heard shouting, and among it, Sir Herbert's voice. Then he went out. On regaining consciousness, he woke up to find himself in Sir Herbert's office and the owner himself bathing his head. Van de Querk also was there, but only looking on.

"What happened?" he asked, as he tried to gather his scattered senses.

"Why, it was a trap," Sir Herbert answered. "After you had gone, the mysterious stranger came to the office and said :"The message I gave McLeod was untrue. It is a trap. Go to his aid at once." Then he left before I could say a word. I gathered some men and hurried to help you. As we came up your assailants ran off and left you so we carried you back to the office."

"Did you get any of them chief?"

"No! unfortunately I arrived too late. Sir Herbert was carrying you away as my men came up. It was too bad. How do you feel now?"

"Pretty groggy, but I guess my heavy clothes saved me from serious harm. I sure have got a score to settle if I ever find anyone to settle it with." He went off to bed to recouperate.

The next morning he got up and going to Sir Herbert said that he would like to lay off that day.

"Certainly," was the reply. "Why don't you go to Wainwright and meet Sergeant Browning. I understand that he gave the hospital a calldown and walked out on them. He should be here today."

"That is a good idea. I can laze all day and shall then be fit for tomorrow."

"Here, this will give you access to a company car," said Sir Herbert.

"Thank you, that will save me going in one of the trucks." McLeod then left the office promising to be on hand the following morning.

Later that day, Sergeant Browning landed his plane at the Wainwright field, and after transacting some business left for the oilwells. His foot was still tender but his active nature would not allow him to lay up any longer than was necessary. He at once got in touch with Sir Herbert, who said, "Did you meet McLeod?"

"No, I did not see him, what time did he leave?"

"It must have been about nine-thirty this morning."

"He should have arrived before I left them. Possibly he has gone some where else. I think I will look up the chief."

"He went away for a couple of days I believe. He spoke about going last night after we rescued McLeod.'

"Rescued Mandy? What from?"

The sergeant then told what had happened, and remarked. "Heaven help them if he recognises them. When they know McLeod as well as I do, they'll know enough to leave him alone. Well, I guess I'll hang around for a spell. Now Mandy has started the ball rolling we may get some action. Can you fix me up in the mess room? I'll find a shack somewhere to sleep in."

"Yes, I'll send word to the mess cook. But why eat with the men? You are welcome to stay here."

"I want to mix as much as possible with the men and I can do it best that way."

"All right then sergeant, but you had better lunch with me today."

"Very well, sir, and then I'll look up McLeod and have a chin wag."

Browning had lunch with Sir Herbert and then prowled round the fields looking for his friend and failing to find him by nightfall, retired much disgruntled with every one and every thing.

"Main number one" was a deep well that had in years passed produced thousands of barrels of oil with a high gasoline content, before the day of electricity; when the motive power was gasoline. This well had paid very large dividends, but for a number of years it had been capped. It was still supposed to have the same pressure as when it first "blew in.' Adjacent to it had been built huge receiving reservoirs and great tanks for the surplus gas. These, at this time were all full. At midnight, as our story continues, a shattering ex-

USE LEVENING AGENTS ACCORDING TO RULES

Have you ever started to make a cake and when the work was well under way suddenly realised that the baking powder tin was emptied? If you understand a few of the under lying principles of leavening agents you will have no difficulty in substituting for the baking-powder. If you do not, your only solution is to visit your nearest neighbor and borrow some.

Baking powder is made up of 50 per cent acid and 25 per cent alkali The acid used may be a phosphate or a tartrate. If cream of tartar is used the resulting baking-powder is spoken of as a tartrate baking powder. The alkali used is baking soda. The remaining 25 per cent is made up of cornstarch. This starch absorbs any extra moisture and prevents the chemical action starting in the can.

If your recipe calls for two teaspoons of baking powder the rule is to substitute one teaspoon of cream of tartar and one half teaspoon of soda.

The general rule given for the use of baking powder is to use two teaspoons of baking powder to each cup of flour. This may seem a large amount to you but this rule calls for two level teaspoons. The heaping measure that is used so often contains double the level measure that is used in the recipe.

One teaspoon soda is required for two cups of sour milk. It is also recommended that an additional tea spoon of baking powder be added for each cup of flour.

If eggs are used, the rule is to decrease the amount of baking powder by one half teaspoon for each egg. The egg white holds some air when beaten up, so that there is not the same amount of leavening agent required.

While these rules apply to all flour mixtures, there are slight variations when other ingredients are added. When Graham flour or fruit is added the same grain is not expected. Have you ever tried adding raw apples to some of your recipes. Applesauce is frequently added but it makes a nice change sometimes to add small pieces of raw apples. This is tried out in the two recipes which are given here.

APPLE MUFFINS

1½ cups bran
1 cup flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ cup brown sugar
1 cup diced apples
1 tablespoon butter
1 cup sweet milk
1 egg
Pinch salt

Mix and sift the flour, baking powder, salt and sugar.n Add the bran and mix all the dry ingredients. Peel and core the apples. Cut into small pieces and add to the dry ingredients Beat the egg and mix with the milk. Add to the dry ingredients and add the butter last of all. Put in greased muffin tins and bake in a moderate oven twenty-five to thirty minutes.

APPLE LOAF

1 pint light bread sponge
¼ cup molasses
1 tablespoon lard
1 cup chopped apple
Graham flour

Add the molasses, lard and apple to the bread sponge. It is a rather good idea to save out a little of the regular sponge when baking bread. Add enough graham flour to make a soft dough. Knead and shape into a loaf. Let rise until very light. Bake in a moderate oven.

Apple fritters are made in much the same way The chopped apples are added to the fritter mixture and the fritters are cooked in deep fat. The recipe will be sent on request. Use the coupon at the bottom of this article.

Household Hints

One job that seems to need attention regularly is dusting. Many people scatter the dust when they are dusting. An oiled duster is necessary, so that the dust can be collected and not scattered These dusters are rather expensive but they can be made at home without any cost. The method used is very simple and the ingredients are found in most homes. Use the coupon at the bottom of this article and the directions will be sent at once.

The True Canadian

plosion took place at this well, and a furio flame, some two hundred feet high, shot up skyward with a roar that could be heard for miles. The whole countryside was illuminated as by a vast torch from the bowels of the earth. Men streamed from the bunkhouse, and the fire division was rapidly on the scene. A strong westerly wind bowed the giant flame like a grain stalk in a field.

Alarms rang out and lengths of hose were soon run from the boiler houses. Sweating men strained at these writhing serpents as they played live steam on the mouth of the well. It had no effect. Men tired and collapsed with the heat. Others took their places. Sergt. Browning was everywhere at once, giving orders and directing here and there. Foremen and well-drillers shouted and struggled to bring up the chemical batteries that were used to subdue such fires. Sir Herbert was running around, getting in everybody's way, giving orders that nobody paid any attention to, and in general, making a nuisance of himself. Such was ever the way of chief executives.

After four days of fighting, the men were congratulating themselves that they were getting the flaming well under control and the emergency cap was being put into place when another explosion took place. This time the larger of the huge tanks went up and flaming oil spread everywhere. The reservoirs caught and in no time the whole eastern part of the oilfield was a blazing inferno. Eye witnesses said that two men were blown skyward when the tank went up but so many men were killed and injured in the ensuing days that two men more or less were of no consequence. Hundreds of men were working like fiends and every piece of machinery that was available was brought up. In addition to the company hospital emergency dressing stations were organised. Field kitchens were put into use, the company buildings seemed to char and wither away with the intense heat. Tents were ordered and delivered by aeroplane. The police had to be reinforced in order to handle the immense crowd of sightseers who impeded the work.

There are no more heroic men in world than well-drillers and their helpers in times of adversity. Little has been said either in song or story of these men who produce our oil, yet, when the eddying wind suddenly gathered the huge flame in its embrace and swept the ground with it like a sickle, five men were found lying in its wake, beside their chemical engine, burned to a crisp. Five others, daring the danger, immediately took their places. The fire was by now taking on the aspect of a national calamity. Extra fire apparatus was voluntarily sent from all over the country. Chemical engines were rushed by a special train, truck loads of supplies or the workers, ambulances for the injured and into the midst of this came Marion and Claire.

They sought Sir Herbert, and find ing him were shocked by his appearance. He had turned in a few days, into an aged man. Being "President of the Associated Oils" he felt his position keenly, but far more did he ve at the growing list of killed and injured that mounted hourly. When questioned by the girls as to the whereabouts of McLeod and Browning, he answered in monosyllables and pointed vaguely to the crowd of men milling round the fire. Claire at once left Marion and began to hunt for Browning. For two hours she searched unceasingly and eventually found him, but no longer the debonair sergeant that she had known. Seeing his oil-soaked uniform in the crowd she caught his arm, only to look into a wild-eyed, oil-stained face that she did not recognise, "Paul Paul, it must be you," she gasped.

"Yes, it is I, have you seen Mandy anywhere?"

"No, we have only lately arrived. What a terrible affair, however will they get it out?"

"I don't know yet. They have had the pumps going in the reservoirs, but the power keeps going off, so little headway is being made."

"Poor fellow, you look worn out. Come with me and see Marion, and then rest."

"I can't rest until I find Mandy. He must be here somewhere."

"When did you eat last?"

"I don't know Claire, what does it matter? Nobody is stopping to eat now, fight and sleep, fight and sleep that's all. I must find Mandy."

"You must come with me and rest you are dead on your feet. No argument now, you are coming with me," and taking him by the hand she forced him to go with her. They met Marion just as she was leaving her Father.

"Oh Paul," she cried, "whatever have you been doing to yourself, you look all in. Have you seen Armand?"

"No Marion, I cannot find him any where, I have searched for days."

"For days!" she almost screamed. "Do you mean that he's—he's," her eyes brimmed with tears, "Oh, don't say he's dead, Paul?"

"He was to meet me in Wainwright when I came up here, but didn't show up, and he hasn't been seen since he left your father seven days ago." The sergeant sank into a chair and Claire at once took charge of him. Marion, with a look in her eyes bordering on insanity, rushed from the room crying "Armand, Armand, where is Armand?" Claire found the distracted girl going from one to the other of the workers eagerly seeking the face of the man who, now that he was lost to her, she found that she loved. Using all her powers of persuasion. Claire finally got her back to Sir Herbert's house and managed with Sir Herbert to quieten her down.

"Oh Daddy, find Armand for me, I love him. He must be out there somewhere; he can't be dead. I won't believe he's dead, find him for me, Daddy."

"Hush pet," said Sir Herbert, stroking her silky hair, "we'll find him for you. He's out there in some corner fighting the fire. Try and rest yourself girlie, you wouldn't want Armand to see you like this, would you?" And so on until Marion put her head on her father's shoulder and burst into a flood of tears. Having secured the effect for which he had been working, Sir Herbert surrendered her to Claire, who led her to the bedroom and made her lie down.

Meanwhile, as though laughing and dancing at the futile efforts of man, the flames rose higher than ever. Every little while the wind would change its quarter and they would swirl round the firemen. All known methods of fighting burning oil had been tried, and when by almost super human efforts, the striving men would seem to get the better of the monster, a fresh gust of wind would undo all that they had gained. The well itself had been left, as it was the least dangerous. All the efforts were concentrated on the reservoirs and the surrounding wells.

Never in the history of the North American continent had such a disastous fire been known. Offers of aid were made from the United States, and accepted, and appliances were rushed from the Oklahoma, Texas, and California oil fields, but all to no avail. Despite the efforts to confine the fire, other explosions started other wells and efforts were redoubled

The town of Wainwright was one huge hospital. Every house harbored some badly burned or injured man.

Intrepid airmen flew to the scene of the fire and took news reels which were broadcast hourly throughout the world. More than one plane, caught in an eddy of smoke, crashed to the ground. A giant passenger plane flew into a derrick and crashed Eventually special aerial police were organised to keep the field area clear Sergt. Browning worked with added zest when he awoke from his sleep, and kept an ever watchful eye open for Mandy. Claire worked industriously among the injured and in looking after the sergeant, while Marion, after recovering from her outburst, organised a search party from the onlookers, who did not seem to be doing anything and offered $1000 to to the first man to bring her information of McLeod.

She loved him dearly, and had decided that if she could not have him alive she would get his dead body, if possible. At least, she thought, she would have something to grieve over. There was no doubt that the fire had been of incendiary origin and she vowed to spend all her money and the rest of her days in prosecuting a search for the men whom she felt were responsible for Armand's death —if he was dead. Word was brought to her from everywhere of men that resembled Armand. An injured man here, a dead one there, and she rushed from place to place, full of hope each time, only to turn away with, "No, that is not he."

She became pale and drawn, and few who knew her would have recognised in her the well-poised young woman of a few days ago.

On the third day after the girl's arrival, Browning did not appear for supper, so Claire went in search of him. She went to where he had been working and was told that he had been injured by a falling derrick. Clutching at her heart as she heard the news, she hurried to the emergency dressing room, and there found her man. He was unconcious. One side of his body had been almost cooked by the red hot derrick as it struck him down. An artery had been cut and he had lost considerable blood. Talking to a doctor she was told that his recovery was doubtful unless he could be taken to a hospital where he could get special treatment. At once Claire claimed him and set about making arrangements for taking him away. Like Marion, she was possessed of plenty of money and did not study cost where her lover was concerned. A special plane was hired, and Browning carefully lifted into it. With a fond good-bye to Marion and Sir Herbert, Claire went with her chosen man to the Holy Cross hospital at Calgary.

After the house surgeon had examined his patient he shook his head "His vitality is very low," he said, "and while normally he was of strong constitution, some strenuous ordeal has made great inroads on his physical resistance. If he recovers concious ness by morning, we might try a blood transfusion and later a grafting it is his only hope. I must get a subject at once." Claire offered herself and was sent for a blood test. Passing this she again reported to the surgeon and was ordered to bed. We will leave them both in his capable hands and take our reader to far off Sydney where we will peek into Jules Lemieux's laboratory.

Part Four

PART TWO

Jules Lemieux was pouring some heavy oil into a small vat and on filling it, set it alight. He then donned a gas mask and taking up a small cylinder pointed it at the burning oil He pressed a release valve and immediately a greyish vapor sprayed from the nozzle and settled over the vat. Wherever it came into contact with the flame, it extinguished it, and the gas lay inert, covering the vat like a blanket. He tried the same thing with gasoline with the same result. After repeating the operation several times he ran from the laboratory, tore the mask from his face and called, "I have it, I have it at last," as he ran to the house. Once there, he got Sir Herbert on the Radiophone. "I've got it," he almost screamed.

"Got what Jules?" came Sir Herbert's tired voice.

"The gas that I have been working on so long. The gas that will put your fire out for you and any others. It is easily manufactured in quantity from common substances that are found in any chemical plant. Get a list of the plants that are handy to you and ask them to clear their retorts and vats and stand by for my orders. I am leaving here at once in a fast plane and will radiophone them as soon as I arrive at the field. Have lorries at each plant and cylinders for the gas. No time need be lost."

"All right Jules, do you think it will work?"

Doubling a Retail Business in Five Years

An Advertisement Addressed to

TO DOUBLE A RETAIL BUSINESS IN FIVE YEARS, ADD 15 PER CENT. TO THE SALES OF THE PRECEDING YEAR AT THE END OF FIVE YEARS, SALES WILL BE DOUBLE THEIR PRESENT AMOUNT.

our Local Retailers

Increasing one's sales to the extent of 15 per cent. per annum to sales can be accomplished in two main ways. Thus:

1. Increase the amount of each sales transaction by an average of 15 per cent. (Note: This is not the same as raising your prices 15 per cent. To do that would be fatal, even if possible.)

2. Increase the number of customers served daily to the extent of 15 per cent.

Good salesmanship will enable a retailer to raise the level of his average sales transaction——with advantage to both his customer and himself. Thus a well-informed buyer will readily pay 20 cents or 25 cents more for a pair of gloves or stockings or shoes or for a piece of enamelware, if the better value of the higher-priced article is well presented.

But the better way of raising sales to the extent of 15 per cent is to increase the number of your customers.

Customer-increase comes from (1) satisfactory service, (2) satisfactory goods and prices; (3) good window displays and (4) good advertisements in this newspaper.

Men and women buyers always want to be informed, in their homes, by newspaper advertisements, about things which they plan to buy; and they are responsive to retailers' invitations. Also, they like to see the advertisements of those retailers whose customers they are.

A silent retailer can hardly hope to increase his business; and it's pretty certain he won't double it in five years.

Samples of Western Canada's 1931 crop were recently rushed to the Atlantic seaboard over Canadian National Railways, enroute to the voracious grain markets of the world. Bearing with them the hopes of prairie farmers, more than one thousand of the small bags of wheat were filled to grain exchange and grain trade associations in Germany, Holland, Italy, Belgium, Ireland and Scotland.

Made up annually by the Western Grain Standards Committee in Winnipeg, the samples contain grain from practically every district in the West and give a fair indication of the quality of wheat which European consumers may expect in the filling of large orders. Specimens of each mem's authorized, each sample is grade are included and, before shipanalyzed and approved by Dr. F. J. MUCH TOO ONE SIDED.

Alberta members of the Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association have taken a definite stand regarding free government publicity. They have decided to refrain from publishing all publicity matter sent out by the government, until the government sees fit to fulfill its promise of co-operation with the newspapers.

The publishers of ninety-two weekly newspapers concurred in this matter, as the flood of free publicity material threatens to bury the average newspaper office. As the resolution states: "Weekly newspapers cannot carry on their business successfully with kind words and glowing promises," says an exchange.

All this propaganda, while doubtless containing information of value is distinctly in the interests of the governemnt. Its free dissemination through the press enhances the standing of the government, which pays salaries to the promoters and the composers of the articles. But it is the newspaper publisher who pays the printer to set up the material for the pubic to read. Why should he contribute money out of his own pocket to spread such information as any existing government decides should be spread.

In this respect, Alberta is said to be a more serious offender than any other province. And the unfortunate feature is that many acts and regulations which it is important that the public should know, are never brought to attention through the press. New acts are passed, following which there is no systeamtic attempt to inform the public. The result is that many violations are committed through ignorance, and the entrance of the officers of the law is the first intimation that a law has been broken. It would seem to be the clear duty of any government to inform citizens through the press of any changes or amendments in law. Only in this way would they be playing fair with the public, especially in instances where violations are likely to result in costly fines.

Certainly there is an abundance of government employees, inspectors, clerks, etc., all drawing salares for something or other. For long now the weekly press has belonged to this army, differing only from others in the fact that its services, though admittedly valuable, are unpaid. Newspaper men have decided to call a halt in this expensive form of philanthropy, and call for a little compensation.

BIDDING TO MAKE GAME

Business at all times demands the finest qualities of those who make partners their life's work. The qualities of leadership, courage, initiative, honesty, broadmindedness, understanding and intelligence among others, determine success or failure on the part of the individual or the nation—they are the intangibilities of our assets and represent wealth in as real a sense as do land and timber, mineral ore and factories.

For indeed what are this latter or of what avail, without the human equalities which make of them realities? Land of itself does not make a farm nor waterfalls electric power. It is the creativeness of man which is the very lifeblood of business. Gold is not finance without the banker, clay cannot be fashioned without the potter at the wheel. We need to turn our minds at times upon these things and aim to seize the full import of their significance.

As far as the material assets of Canada are concerned we are as rich today as ever, as far as the immaterial are concerned we are, it is truly said, far richer. Events of the past two or three years have taught us many lessons or at least should have we thoroughly believe it to be so, we are richer in experience than we were. If this premise is sound, and therefore it is most reasonable to suggest that the future holds greater opportunities in store for us than it did a generation ago. The qualities and accumen possessed of the people are more developed and consequently we are more fitted to make advantageous use of the gifts with which this country is so liberally endowed. In the final analysis of our national economic life will be just exactly what we, as Canadian business men make it.

When, however, we witness in so many spheres around also unfortunate occurrences, when we ourselves also experience as individuals the effects of depressing influences in business, it does admittedly require courage, unusual determination to carry us ahead in these days and it may be added a dominating intelligence in all things to make our progress the more secure. We would indeed be ridiculous if we allowed ourselves to become panicky, the more so as there is not the remotest reason for any apprehension.

We have, on the other hand, seen the worst of the depression. It has spent its force. While its influences may still be felt in many quarters, in other spheres unmistakable signs of recovery are quite apparent. For our own part, we are definitely of the opinion that in days to come we shall speak of the depression of 1929-31 but that we shall refer to 1932 as a year of constructive effort. With prices readjusting themselves the world over with the purchasing habits of the people reappearing in less extravagant channels, with our financial life on a more sound rock-bottom basis with our primary and processive production at a more economical level, and with most encouraging signs of constructive endeavor along sound lines at last evident in the sphere of international economy, surely it may be said that the nations are beginning to fall in step for the onward march.

Will Canada lag behind or will she be in the van of progress? That will depend on every individual business man, whether farmer, financier, industrialist or merchant. We must not be content with small achievement. There is every reason to consider that we hold the trump hand of opportunity and we would indeed be lacking in enterprise and acumen if we were content with a couple of tricks. We should bid to make game for there can be no question of our fulfilling the contract with a winning score in the honors column.—Commerce of the Nation.

EXORBITANT INTEREST ON SMALL LOANS

(Toronto Financial Post)

A few months ago a kind-hearted man in Toronto, endorsed a note for a friend. The note fell due and the endorser was forced to borrow money on his car to meet the obligation he had assumed. He went to an apparently reputable automobile loan finance company in the city and negotiated a loan for $254, against which the firm took a chattel mortgage on his automobile.

By the time the loan company had deducted all its so-called "interest charges, fees, commissions," and so forth, the net proceeds of the loan were reduced to $180 from which the borrower had to pay $13.30 for fire and theft insurance on his car. Assume, however, he got $180, what will this money cost him?

By the terms of his contract he is obligated to pay $25.40 every month for ten months until the gross amount of the loan is repaid. This means that he will pay $74 for the use of the $180 which, if he were to have the $180 the full ten months would be at the rate of a little over 49 per cent per annum.

Total Cost About 135 Per Cent

But it is obvious that he will have the use of this $180 for nothing like ten months, for the entire loan will be paid back in ten months, and after the first month he will have the use of only $180 less the $25.40 he has paid as his first installment, or $154.60. At the end of the second month he will have outstanding only $129.20, and so on, until he eventually builds up a credit of $48.60 at the end of the ninth month. This means that his average loan over the ten-month period has been only $65.70 for which he will pay $74, which amounts to approximately 135 per cent per annum in simple interest.

Unusual? Exorbitant? On the contrary it is one of the commonest transactions in the every-day life of every Canadian city. Look up the county clerk records in any Canadian municipality and you will see hundreds of such transactions going through. In Toronto alone the volume of such business in a year is estimated at over $15,000,000. The loan shark who put through the actual deal outlined above is putting through scores of similar deals every week. He operates on one of the busiest thoroughfares in the city and advertises his automobile loan business throughout the city.

What are we going to do about it? Thinks Canada Years Behind Times

An outstanding United States economist who has been closely connected with small loan legislation in the United States, visited Canada this summer and was astounded that Canada has done little toward stamping out the inquities of letting small loan sharks prey upon thousands and thousands of honest Canadian citizens who—in many cases, through no fault of their own, are forced to raise $50, $100 or $200 in a hurry and can get no satisfaction or accommodation at the hands of our Canadian chartered banks. He believes we are ten years behind the times in not safeguarding the wage-earner and salaried man against this iniquitous high way robbery which is practiced openhandedly under the very eyes of the law and in direct defiance of all our laws of interest and usury.

In the United States through the efforts of the Russell Sage Foundation and other philanthropic bodies, uniform small loan legislation has now been enacted in between 25 and 30 states and by this means, honest, legitimate personal loan finance companies and industrial banking concerns have been encouraged until today they do a volume of business estimated at approximately $2,600,000,000 per annum. This business is not only profitable to the individual companies but it provides loans for some thing like 15,000,000 borrowers a year, at rates that are both sufficient to make operations profitable and yet which are reasonable to the borrower in view of the risks involved in this type of business.

WONDERS NEVER CEASE

What would your grandparents say if they heard you ask your local merchant for a carton of porterhouse steak or green peas? Perhaps this strikes you as peculiar, but almost before you realize it you may be doing this very thing.

Developements in using 50-below-zero cold for freezing foods indicate that extensive changes in our food supply system are coming in the next few years.

Scientists point out that with the recent discovery of a process for rendering foods virtually imperishable while kept in a hard-frozen state, a means has been found by which the flavor, texture and appearance of meats, vegetables and other perishable foods can be safeguarded for long periods.

Following the statement by Clarence Birdseye, quick-freezing inventor,, that nearly 80 cents of the average consumer's food dollar is spent for perishable foods, economists say that the new method of freezing foods promises to improve several economic conditions.

Among these promised aids are stabilization of growers' prices for food crops ironing out the peaks and valleys of seasonable food prices to the public; and saving huge quantities of perishable foods that under present conditions spoil before they can be sold through clogged market channels.

To the public, probably the most significant aspect of quick-frozen foods will be the change they will bring to the familiar food store.

Already, in the minds of thousands of people familiar with quick-frozen foods, porterhouse steak and oysters and green peas are just ordinary grocery items, like breakfast food and crackers and coffee.

Packed and sealed in sanitary cartons before they are quick-frozen, the new food products are dispensed in stores from low-temperature display cabinets as simply as canned beans and tuna fish are sold off the shelves, with no waiting while meat is being cut, trimmed, weighed and wrapped, or while vegetables and fruits are being examined, picked over and put in bags.

It is said that prices for quick-frozen foods will probably be lower than for the same kinds and grades of unfrozen foods because quick-freezing the products near their source eliminates spoilage and waste and because costs of transporting and handling will be greatly reduced.

WINTER CARE OF THE BEEF HERD

(Experimental Farms Note)

The kinds and amounts of feeds used in the winter feeding of the beef herd should be governed to a large extent by the condition of the cows and young stock when they go into winter quarters. If they go into the winter in poor condition, due to shortage of feed on pasture, grain should be added to the ration fed to the bred cows to get them into fair condition before calving, and also to sows nursing their calves if good condition on both cow and calf is desired. Cows in calf should not be allowed to run down in flesh, else they will be unable to produce vigorous calves and nourish them with a good flow of milk.

At the Dominion Experimental Station, Lacombe, Alberta, silage made from corn, sunflowers, or oats form the principal part of the winter ration for the beef herd. Cows and calves relish it and thrive on it when some supplement is added. The silage has laxative properties which keep the digestive organs of the animal in good condition. The usual quantity of silage fed is about three pounds per day for each one hundred pounds of live weight. The silage is supplemented with a good hay (legume preferred) and other roughage such as "oat hay" or green feed. The usual practice is to give the herd all the hay or green feed they will consume twice daily without unnecessary waste. If, however, hay is scarce or high in price the amount of hay is reduced and more silage fed.

In order to keep the young stock growing and thrifty and the cows that are nursing calves up in condition, some grain is fed. Oats, which forms the basis of the ration is mixed with barley, a little bran and at times, for high-class cattle, a little oil-cake meal. Grain rations for such young stock and cows will vary from one or two pounds per day up to six or eight pounds, according to conditions.

The breeding herd is turned out daily for exercise, except in stormy or unusually severe weather, in a yard which is sheltered from the prevailing winds. Water is always available in a trough with a tank heater and coarse salt is placed in boxes where cattle can lick it at will.

WOMAN ANGLER IS WINNER OF TROPHY

The honor of having landed the largest muskellunge this season in the White Fish Bay area of the Lake of the Woods goes to a woman, according to the Tourist and Convention Bureau of the Canadian National Railways. The lucky angler is Mrs. Harry Gophart of Chicago, who landed her prize winning 44½ pound fish after an hour and a half struggle. Mrs. Gophart becomes the owner of a handsome sterling silver trophy in the form of a 17-inch model of a fighting muskie leaping from the water.

Use for ANY BABY

WE can never be sure just what makes an infant restless, but the remedy can always be the same. Good old Castoria! There's comfort in every drop of this pure vegetable preparation, and not the slightest harm in its frequent use. As often as Baby has a fretful spell, is feverish, or cries and can't sleep, let Castoria soothe and quiet him. Sometimes it's a touch of colic. Sometimes constipation. Or diarrhea—a condition that should always be checked without delay. Just keep Castoria handy, and give it promptly. Relief will follow very promptly; if it doesn't, you should call a physician.

AN OFFICIAL STATEMENT

Definite, decisive and Authoritative

It has come to the attention of the Alberta Wheat Pool that opponents are persistently repeating that those who deliver grain o Alberta Wheat Pool or Alberta Pool Elevators will be compelled to contribute a portion of the proceeds of their grain for reserves or any indebtedness in connection with 1929 Pool overpayment.

That statement is a deliberate untruth! It has been refuted time and again, but still is being industriously circulated.

The Alberta Wheat Pool herewith repeats definitely and finally, that NO DEDUCTIONS will be taken from the proceeds of deliveries of the 1931 crop to the Alberta Wheat Pool or Alberta Pool Elevators for reserves or for payment of any indebtedness in connection with 1929 Pool overpayment.

If any one advises you differently, you are asked to write Head Office of Alberta Wheat Pool, Calgary.

Thumb Nail Sketches By Cy

Two Fur Coats

IT was at Toronto Exhibition last year. A typical American farmer, a true Uncle Sam, even to the bit of spinach on his chin, strolled along the passage way scrutinizing the exhibits. He was a married man of some years standing, as evidenced by the fact that his wife, to whom he spoke frequently, strolled along a few feet in the rear.

Finally he stood quite still and gazed across the passage way. His eyes were fixed upon a moderately sized printed card, framed and supported by an easel which rested upon a table inside the railing.

The expression of his mouth said plainly, "Here's something good. It'll be a new one on neighbor Smart." He didn't move for some minutes. For a few moments after the arrival of the wife there was quiet, animated, but rather happy conversation, accompanied with glances and thumb pointing at the easel across the way. Then the pair, single file, proceeded to cross over.

The attendant who sat by the table upon which the easel rested was attentive and talkative.

"Well, brother, I'll bite. What's the joke?" said our American cousin.

"There is no joke," said the attendant. "If you can place in the hands of the Secretary of this organization at Regina on or before March 1st, 1932, the ten ears of corn which a competent committee of judges conclude are the best ten ears of corn in the world, we will pay you $800 in good Canadian cash—and you can take the corn back home with you."

The eyes of the pair shifted to the large painting at the rear of the exhibit. "Oh, I see, Mother," said he to Mrs. Sam, "this is a grain show."

They looked again at the easel. "Egad," he muttered, "that's $80 a cob—a bit fishy, isn't it?"

Then to the wife, "Say, Mother, wha' did I get at Chicago that time my corn got into the money class?"

She spoke now for the first time. "$20," she informed him.

"Pretty big prize, $800!"

"Gimme some of your literature," he requested. "You Canadians have put one over us for the present, but wait till 1932 before you crow too loud. Mother and I had planned to take a trip to Texas in '32 but we're coming to Regina and we're going to bring that corn along with us. $800 of good Canadian cash looks good to me. Two nice fur coats—one for mother and one for me—will help us to put on a bit of style befitting a visit from the "World's Corn King" when we come back in 1933 to thank you personally for your generosity."

"Good-bye and good luck."

Mr. and Mrs. Sam crossed to the other side of the passage way and resumed their sight seeing where they left off a short time before.

The easel and the card now reposes on the attendant's desk in the office of the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference at Regina. The offer, "$800 for ten ears of corn" still stands good and it is open to all the world.

CONTINUATION OF CEMETERY COMMITTEE

Geo. C. Elliott Ltd., chloride of lime	19.80
H. Roenville, sundry calls re fire department	7.00
Wilfred Duperron, ditto	7.00
Harold Brunker, ditto	5.00
Joseph Wright, ditto	6.00
Joseph Richardson, assisting fire department	1.00

On motion the report of the Finance committee was accepted and ordered incorporated in the proceedings, and the Mayor and Secretary-Treasurer were authorized to issue cheques in payment of the several accounts.

The Fire, Water, Light and Gas committee reported as follows:

During the past month there have been three calls for the service of the fire brigade. One residential, one prairie, and one truck fire on the street. These occurred on the 9th, 23rd and 24th ult. respectively. In only one instance was chemical used although the machine was out at each call with a couplement of men.

On Nov. 2nd the fire chief with the necessary help cleared the fire water line and found each hydrant in perfect order and ready for any emergency which may arise. The pumps, motors, water tanks, etc., are all also in first-class condition for winter.

On motion, the report of the Fire, Water, Light and Gas committee was accepted and ordered incorporated in the proceedings of the meeting.

The Parks and Cemetery committee submitted the following report:

The work undertaken by this committee for the improvement of the Wainwright cemetery has been suspended for the present season chiefly from a desire to economize. We feel that sufficient work has been done for the present year, and although the continuance of the work would give at least some employment, we are of the opinion that the taxpayer is entitled to consideration where Wainwright cemetery has been sustained.

The total amount expended on the cemetery during the present season amounts to approximately $205.00 of which amount $196.25 was for labor performed and the balance for material, tools and the re-conditioning of tools.

We are of opinion that the town has received good value for the amount expended. A considerable area has been cleared and cleaned up the fences have been repaired and the cemetery has been restaked. This adds much to the attractiveness of the cemetery and assists materially in the locating of the various plots. We have also introduced regulations governing the sale of plots, the digging and cleaning up of graves and the entrance of vehicles to the cemetery. This, we believe, will aid to a great extent in maintaining the cemetery in a more attractive state at all times.

An unsuccessful effort was made last spring to obtain from the municipal districts tributary to Wainwright some financial assistance in the improvement of the cemetery. The failure of these districts to render any assistance leads us to believe that a misapprehension exists in the minds of at least some of those living outside the town as to the intent of the Town of Wainwright in acquiring this land and establishing a cemetery thereon.

It is true that the Town of Wainwright has title to the land on which the cemetery is located and has named it, "The Wainwright Cemetery". The Town of Wainwright paid the purchase price of the land and has thus far been called upon to finance any improvements which have been made. Nevertheless the intention was and is, that the Wainwright cemetery be a community benefit with the result that the same privileges are extended to residents of the district outside the town as to residents of the town. The selection of plots and the price to be paid therefor are the same to all. The Wainwright cemetery should, therefore, be the interest of all and its improvement a like duty of town and country district. It is true that the cemetery committee of the Wainwright Town Council retain control over any work undertaken but we cannot believe that this committee will at any time refuse its acquiescence in any work for the improvement of the cemetery. Being a community cemetery, all should join in making the Wainwright cemetery the most attractive cemetery in this part of the province.

On motion, the report of the Parks and Cemetery committee was accepted and ordered incorporated in the proceedings, with Councillor Mcleod voting in the negative.

Tenders for scavenging the town and maintaining the streets were received from Messrs. Donald Goodrich William Bibby Sr., P. Rutherford, Harold Spaven, Fred Sheffield and J. R. Cameron.

On motion, the tender of Fred Sheffield was accepted and the Secretary-Treasurer was instructed to have the necessary agreement, covering this contract, prepared and executed.

On motion, the Secretary-Treasurer was authorized to advertise that Council are prepared to grant a limited amount of financial and other assistance toward the establishing of an open-air skating rink, for the purpose of furnishing recreation in the Town of Wainwright during the approaching winter, on a site acceptable to Council and inviting applications for the privilege; the applicants to set out fully the assistance required, the site on which the proposed rink will be established, the accommodation which will be provided and a schedule of the nights for skating and charges to be made with information as to whether music will be provided and its character and frequency.

On motion, the renting of the council chamber for meetings, together with the collections of rentals therefor, was left in the hands of the Secretary-Treasurer on the understanding that the minimum rental for any meeting be five dollars; this price to increase in proportion to the length of time the Chamber will be occupied and in proportion to the number likely to be in attendance. The matter of granting free use of the council chamber for local or philanthropic purposes was left to the discretion of the Secretary-Treasurer who shall satisfy himself, before granting the use of the chamber free, that any funds coming under the control of those in whose interests the meeting is being organized shall be used for the benefit of the public at large or for philanthropc purposes and not for the advancement of any individual or individuals nor of any private institution.

On motion the price charge per tank for the pumping and disposal of sewage from cesspools was reduced from the persent price of seventy-five cents per tank to fifty cents per tank.

On motion, Council was regularly adjourned.

ENGLISH CHILDREN CELEBRATE DISCOVERY OF GUY FAWKES PLOT

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 5—Today is Guy Fawkes Day. Visitors to London from afar doubtless have been puzzled the last few days at being stopped on the sidewalks by parties of children carrying an effigy of a man and beseeching passersby to "Remember the Guy." Bonfires and firecrackers are the order of the day. The visitor perhaps has been still more surprised to learn this curious ritual possesses direct associations with one of the quaintiest ceremonies attending the opening of parliament.

Before the new parliament met last Tuesday the crypt of the houses of parliament was searched as usual by members of the Yeomen of the Guard from the Tower of London, arrayed in their quaint Tudor uniforms. It so happens this parliament assembles the same week as the 326th anniversary of the assembling of parliament by James 1, when Guy Fawkes and his confederates plotted to blow up the King, lords and commoners together, having hired a cellar beneath the houses of parliament and filled it with barrels of gunpowder. Fawkes was caught and under torture revealed the names of his fellow-conspirators.

The searching today of the vaults of parliament is a reminder of the plot which miscarried three centuries ago.

EXPRESS RATES MEET TRUCK COMPETITION

A further move in the determined attack which Canadian railways are carrying into the camps of motor trucking companies, went into effect on November 7th with the establishment of a special rate on express shipments of fruit and vegetables between Winnipeg and Manitoba points. The new tariff compares with motor trucking rates and, in addition, provides for pick-up and delivery with usual rapid express service.

Here and There

Growing of ginseng for the Chinese market has developed into a substantial business at Waterford, Ont., where about 45,000 pounds of this root were produced last year, valued at $370,000.

Fine, unusually warm, weather has favored threshing operations in the north-west of Canada during October and has raised the grade of wheat substantially, according to the crop report of the Canadian Pacific's Agricultural Department.

Evaporators in the Annapolis Valley are now working full time and are consuming large quantities of low grade apples. Markets for the evaporated product are being found in Montreal and Toronto with an occasional car for the Canadian West.

The canoe continues to be popular. A recent official report shows that in the last five years in Canada building of canoes has increased by over 30 per cent. in the number of establishments making them and by 88 per cent. in the value of the output.

Canary Korndyke Alcatra is dead. This was the world-famous Holstein cow which in 1928 created a world record of approximately 1,080 pounds of butterfat in 305 days. She was later purchased by the Saskatchewan Government for $10,000 for breeding purposes.

Due to fall of the Canadian dollar and rise in the French franc, there will be no reduction in the price of wines to Canadians this winter, according to L. B. Cordeau, Chairman of the Quebec Liquor Commission, interviewed aboard Canadian Pacific Empress of Britain on his return recently from a tour of Europe.

Visiting Canada for the purpose of studying all phases of the grocery trade, a party of British grocer apprentices are making a tour of the leading centres of Eastern Canada which includes Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton, London, Guelph, Welland and Niagara, travelling Canadian Pacific lines. They will return to England on S.S. Montclare.

Evangeline Memorial Museum at Grand Pre, N.S., repository of valuable Acadian and other historical relics of Nova Scotia, has been accorded the distinction of inclusion in the directory of the Museum Association, Empire-wide organization, headed by Sir Henry Miers, noted authority, who visited Canada this summer.

Captain A. J. Hailey, R.N.R., veteran commander of the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Canada has been decorated with the Royal Order of Siam by His Majesty King Prajadhipok after conveying the Royal party and suite from Victoria to Hong Kong. Captain Samuel Robinson, of the Empress of Japan was similarly honored when he brought the Royal party to Canada.

Co-operation between Canada's two great railway companies registered an important advance recently when it was officially announced that an agreement had been reached whereby the Canadian National will co-operate with the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Canadian Pacific Steamships in the solicitation of freight, passenger and express traffic for Canadian Pacific ships to and from Canadian Atlantic ports. Reduce the Acid

SICK stomachs, sour stomachs and indigestion usually mean excess acid. The stomach nerves are over-stimulated.

Too much acid makes the stomach and intestines sour. Alkali kills acid instantly. The best form is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia, because one harmless dose neutralizes many times its volume in acid. For 50 years the standard with physicians everywhere.

Take a spoonful in water and your unhappy condition will probably end in five minutes. Then you will always know what to do. Crude and harmful methods will never appeal to you. Go, prove this for your own sake. It may save a great many disagreeable hours.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians in correcting excess acids.

SACRIFICE

(By A. K. R.)

Shall we still sacrifice to heathen gods?
Not heeding bitter lesson of the years;
Shall we unheed the cry of sons and unborn sons:
"Oh, let us live, that we may forge with songs, not tears,
The links that make the chain to Paradise."
Shall we, with aching hearts, blind smiles,
Still send them forth to ruin,—body—soul?
Can we not learn to keep our trust in that one God,
The loving God who gave us Heaven as our goal,
And make the Gods of War our sacrifice?

That advertisements sparkle with money-saving information.

Persistent advertisers show an honest desire to serve everyone well.

The printed page is the proper place for the seller to seek the buyer

Nothing offers such a big opportunity to please trade and build big volume business as does the right kind of advertising.

Advertising through the printed page is the progressive, convenient way to sell goods or service.

Truthful advertising proves itself in accomplishments.

Some business concerns have mistaken ideas about the kind of advertising that is best, while others hesitate because they don't believe in any kind of advertising.

He who hesitates long in business is lost.

To those who do not know a business, it does not exist. It takes persistent advertising to make the public know it and not forget it.

A PUNCH BOARD SWINDLE

Many towns have stringent laws against punch boards of various kinds but they are still quite common in most places. There is a sucker born every minute and until such births cease the punch board will be patronized. An operator more slick than most has recently been offering a punch board containing three thousand numbers, each selling at ten cents. This produces $300, while the prizes range from twenty-five cents to $20, total $100.

The opportunity to make $200 profit is one that many grasp at. After the punch board is installed, however a stranger drops in, buys some candy or cigars and then agrees to take a few punches. He hits upon the lucky number that calls for $20, and of course, is so enthused that he keeps on until he has won a few more of the big prizes. Then he says good-bye and leaves the proprietor with a punch board that contains everything except the prize. Keep an eye on the lucky stranger. You may meet this chap some day.

Returning to the plains of Manitoba, where the thundering hoofs of their proud forbears once pounded beneath the surge of mighty bodies, 21 buffalo were shipped over Canadian National Railways from the National park at Wanwright, to be placed in the Riding Mountain National park. The buffalo will be confined in the new National park as the foundation of an exhibition herd which is being established by the Federal department of the interior.

Quick RELIEF from pain

A lot of things can cause a headache or other pain, but there is one thing that will always give you relief! Just take a tablet or two of Aspirin. Your suffering ceases. Relief comes instantly, regardless of what may have been making your head throb with pain.

Aspirin is harmless—cannot depress the heart. So there's no use waiting for a headache to "wear off." It is useless to endure pain of any kind when you can get Aspirin. It is a blessing to women who suffer regular systemic pain; to men who must work on, in spite of eye-strain, fatigue or neuralgia.

Learn its quick relief for colds; for neuritis, rheumatism, lumbago. Be sure to get Genuine Aspirin. All druggists keep Aspirin tablets.

REFRESHING EATS FOR THIS WEEK

(BY BETTY BARCLAY)

SQUARES AND VANITIES

Can you make a meal tasty from a loaf of bread and a few "fixin's"? Try the first of these two recipes and see how how easily this may be done. For something more elaborate, try the second recipe.

Toasted Cocoanut Squares

1 loaf white bread
1 1|3 cups sweetened condensed milk
1 can cocoanut, southern style

Cut bread into 2-inch squares, ¼-inch thick, dip each square in milk and drain slightly. Then dip in cocoanut covering all sides well. Bake in moderate oven (325 degress F.) 25 minutes, or until golden brown. Makes 3½ dozen squares.

Cocoanut Vanities

1½ cups sifted flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
4 tablespoons butter
1 cup sugar
1 egg, unbeaten
Grated rind of 1 orange
¼ cup milk
½ cup orange juice
4 tablespoons sugar
1 egg white, stiffly beaten
Cocoanut, southern style.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together well. Add egg and beat until light and fluffy. Add orange rind. Add flour, alternately with milk and orange juice, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Cover with thin layer of meringue made by beating sugar into egg white. Sprinkle with cocoanut. Bake 25 minutes in moderate oven. Cool. Cut into diamond shaped pieces. Makes 24 vanities.

Orange frosting

⅞ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon grated orange rind
1 egg white
3 tablespoons orange juice
½ teaspoon lemon juice
Sprinkling of salt

Put sugar, orange rind, unbeaten egg white and orange juice in upper part of double boiler. Beat constantly with rotary beater while cooking over boiling water 7 minutes. Remove from heat, add lemon juice and salt beat thoroughly and spread on cake.

MORE ROLLS

Women seldom tire of tasty rolls—men never. Here are two recipes that I have not used before and which will surely please

Snow-Whirl Chocolate Roll

(4 eggs)

6 tablespoons special cake flour, sifted
6 tablespoons cocoa
½ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ cup sifted sugar
4 egg whites, stiffly beaten
4 egg yolks, beaten until thick and lemon-colored
1 teaspoon vanilla

Sift flour once, measure, add cocoa baking powder, and salt and sift together three times. Fold sugar gradually into egg whites. Fold in egg yolk and vanilla. Fold in flour gradually. Pour into pan 8½x13½ inches, lined with greased paper, and bake in a hot oven 13 minutes. Turn from pan at once onto cloth covered with powdered sugar. Remove paper. Quickly cut off crisp edges of cake. Spread seven minute frosting over cake and roll. Wrap in cloth until cool. Cover with an uncooked chocolate frosting.

Strawberry Jelly Roll

(4 eggs)

¾ cup special cake flour, sifted
½ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ cup sifted sugar
4 egg whites, stiffly beaten
4 egg yolks, beaten until thick and lemon-colored
1 teaspoon vanilla
Strawberry jelly

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Fold sugar into egg whites a small amount at a time. Add egg yolks and vanilla. Fold in flour gradually. Pour into pan, 8½x13½ inches, lined with buttered paper, and bake in hot oven 13 minutes. Turn from pan at once onto cloth covered with powdered sugar. Remove paper. Quickly cut off crisp edges of cake. Spread with jelly and roll. Wrap in cloth until cool.

DO YOU KNOW?

Do you know that there is a disease which, because it is of such common occurence, is regarded by many as being inescapable and of but little importance?

Do you know that this disease is serious in that it causes the death of several hundreds in this country each year?

Do you know that this disease takes toll chiefly from among little children, and that the younger the child is, the less resistance he seems to have.

It is about measles that we are asking these questions—a disease which is of common occurrence because we are all susceptable to it, and which, as a result of our susceptibility, we almost surely contract when first exposed to someone who is suffering from it.

Measles is serious. In the year 1929 this disease was the direct cause of 619 deaths, a number exceeding the number of those due to typhoid fever or scarlet fever in the same year. A recent publication shows that seventy per cent of the measles deaths in Ontario for a period of years were of children in the first three years of life.

These are the facts which we want parents to understand so that they will realize that measles is a serious disease and that they should know how to protect their children from its dangers.

Children should be safeguarded from infection. The younger the child, the more serious is the danger the attack, or else the attack will be so mild that danger will be practically eliminated. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together well. Add egg and beat until light and fluffy. Add orange rind. Add flour, alternately with milk and orange juice, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Cover with thin layer of meringue made by beating sugar into egg white. Sprinkle with cocoanut. Bake 25 minutes in moderate oven. Cool. Cut into diamond shaped pieces. Makes 24 vanities.

and hence the greater the need for care. No child should be carelessly or thoughtlessly exposed to disease. If one child in the home is ill or not feeling well, the other children should be kept away from him. Unfortunately, the most infectious periods of measles is before the rash appears, and so in many cases before measles has been thought of. The result is that most children are likely to be exposed to infection.

Until recently, the best advice which could be given was to watch the exposed child and put him to bed on the first appearance of watery eyes. Even better would it be to put the child to bed eight days after his exposure, because the child who develops his attack of measles when he is in bed is likely to escape complications.

Nowadays we are able to do more than this. If the exposed child is given a dose of serum drawn from persons recently recovered from measles, he will either be protected from only eliminated.

If blood serum from recent convalescents is not available, then the blood from the parents may be used. As nearly every adult has had measles at some time, blood from an adult will likely contain sufficient power to prevent or modify the attack.

Measles is a serious and not infrequently fatal disease. It should be known for what it is and dealt with accordingly.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College St., Toronto will be answered personally by letter.

COLEMAN EDITOR HAS A FEW WORDS TO SAY ON PRESENT AFFAIRS

Roger Babson's inflated reputation as a statistician has been exploded, says H. T. Halliwell, editor of the Coleman Journal, in his weekly comments. Since the depression commenced he reiterated that "prosperity is just around the corner." Now he says we have a surplus in everything except "spirit." A prominent banker says the only way in which normal times will assert themselves is by the old-fashioned law of supply and demand.

Artificial aids to promote so-called prosperity are as all other artificialities. You cannot substitute for the real thing. This depression will end when we have become accustomed to a less frenzied mode of living; when people are less inclined to mortgage the future for luxuries instead of paying for the necessities, and when the efficiency experts who have been so keen on saving money for those whom they work for, turn their attention towards devising schemes.

Gold, an inanimate metal, the idol of the miser and the usurer, a commodity which has neither soul nor sentiment, has indirectly caused much of the distress which unemployed throughout the world are suffering from. Set up as the standard of exchange between most countries of the world. France and the United States have been accumulating such vast reserves that Great Britain has been shortened in its gold reserves until those countries could dictate to Great Britain what value they would place on the pound sterling, nominally worth $4.86 in the States.

It meant that Great Britain's exports were being paid for by other countries at a below par value based on home manufacturing costs. A cessation of business on these lines would eventually have meant national insolvency. To meet such a crisis, extraordinary measures had to be taken. Accordingly, silver will again be recognized as a standard medium of exchange by Great Britain. Many years ago, the late William Jennings Bryan, democratic candidate for the presidency of the United States, fought his campaign on the issue of silver as the coinage of the United States, stating the gold standard would crucify the people. It almost did for the people of Great Britain, and in turn it would have crucified the people of the United States and Canada.

TO HIS SON

The following meditation, which touches the heartstrings, pictures a dad as he stands at the bedside of his son. Many magazines have copied this article, and we do not know the authors name, but it is universal in its appeal to mothers and daddies and sons everywhere:

"Listen son: I am saying this to you as you sleep, one little paw crumpled under your cheek and the blond curls stickily wet on your damp forehead. I have often stolen into your room alone. Just a few minutes ago, as I sat reading my paper in the library, a hot stifling wave of remorse swept over me. I could not resist it. Guiltily I came to your bedside.

"These are things I have been thinking son: I have been cross to you. I scolded you as you were dressing for school because you gave your face merely a dab with a towel. I took you to task for not cleaning your shoes. I called out angrily when I found you had thrown some of your things on the floor.

"At breakfast I found fault too. You spilled things. You gulped down your food. You put your elbows on the table. You spread butter too thick on your bread. And as you started off to play and I made for my train, you turned and waved a little hand and called, "Good-bye, Daddy!" and I frowned and said in reply "Hold your shoulders back!"

"Then it began all over again in the late afternoon. As I came up the hill road, I spied you, down on your knees playing marbles. There were holes in your stockings. I humiliated you before your boy friends by making you march ahead of me back to the house. Stockings were expensive—and if you had to buy them you would be more careful. Imagine that, from a father. It was such stupid, silly logic.

"Do you remember, later, when I was reading in the library, how you came in softly, timidly with a sort of hunted look in your eyes. When I glanced up over my paper impatient at the interruption you hesitated at the door. "What is it you want?" I snapped.

"You said nothing, but ran across in one tempestuous plunge and threw your arms around my neck and kissed me, again and again, and your small arms lightened with an affection that God had set blooming in your heart and which even neglect could not wither. And then you were gone, pattering up the stairs.

"Well son, it was shortly afterwards that my paper slipped from my hands and a terrible sickening fear came over me. Suddenly I saw myself as I really was, in all my horrible selfishness, and I felt sick at heart.

"What has habit been doing to me? The habit of complaining of finding fault, or reprimanding all of these were my rewards for being a boy. It was not that I did not love you; it was that I expected too much of youth. It was measuring you by the yardstick of my own years.

"And there was so much that was good and fine and true in your character. You did not deserve my treatment of you so. The little heart of yours was as big as the dawn itself over the wide hills. And this was shown by your spontaneous impulse to rush in and kiss me good night. Nothing else matters tonight, son. I have come to your bedside, in the darkness, and I have knelt there, choking with emotion and so ashamed.

"It is a feeble atonement, I know you would not understand these things if I told them to you during your waking hours, yet I must say what I am saying, I must burn sacrificial fires, alone, here in your bedroom, and make free confession. And I have prayed God to strengthen me in my resolve. Tomorrow I will be a real daddy! I will chum with you and suffer when you suffer and laugh when you laugh. I will bite my tongue when impatient words come. I will keep saying as if it were a ritual: "He is nothing but a boy, a little boy!"

"I am afraid I have visualized you as a man. Yet as I see you now, so crumpled and weary, I see that you are still a baby. Yesterday you were in your mother's arms, your head on her shoulder. I have asked too much, too much!

"Dear boy, dear little son. A penitent kneels at your infant shrine here in the moonlight. I kiss the little fingers and the damp forehead."

Lest We Forget!

The Eleventh day of November has been selected by Canada for our annual remembrance of our Soldier Dead in such manner we esteem most fitting.

As Wednesday of this week falls upon that date, let us turn aside from business for that one day to join with the Wainwright Legion in recalling and honoring the memory of these, our own Canadian Heroes.

M. L. FORSTER

Mayor of the Town of Wainwright

The True Canadian

"Think! I don't have to think, I know it," and he rang off.

Getting a government scout plane was only a matter of minutes to a man in his eminent position and with in the hour he was on his way to Wainwright. He travelled fast, but we, with the speed of thought, travel faster so we will meet him again at the scene of the fire.

Marion was still viewing all the injured who resembled McLeod but with ever-decreasing hope and as we watch we see her sitting listlessly listening to Sir Herbert as he told her of Lemieux's great discovery. He had made all the arrangements and was impatiently awaiting his friend's arrival. To Marion the fire was of secondary importance and though she strove to fix her attention on what her father was saying, her mind was on the man she loved. During this almost one-sided conversation a knock was heard at the door and Frenchy walked in. Going to Sir Herbert, he said, "Bon jour, M'sieu," and then seeing Marion, "et mam'selle. The policemen, he tell Frenchy he fin' M'sieu McLeod here, yes?"

"You? You are Frenchy? Armands friend?" cried Marion who had heard of him from McLeod.

"Oui Mam'selle, you know M'sieu McLeod, yes? You tell Frenchy where he fin' his frien'?"

"Yes, I know him Frenchy, but we can't find him anywhere. I've hunted for years, it seems, he must be dead, if he were alive we should have heard something of him by this time."

"Dead?" Frenchy's hand flew to his ever ready knife. "Nom de Dieu" no man kill Frenchy's friend and live You know maybe, who kill him, Mam'selle?"

"No Frenchy, I don't. If I did I could almost use your knife myself," she clenched her small fist.

"You like M'sieu a leetle bit, eh?" queried the half-breed with a Frenc eye for romance.

"Like him? I love him better than life itself."

"Frenchy, he glad," saying which, he dropped on his knees before her and with old world cavalier grace raised her fingers to his lips. "Mam' selle, you tell Frenchy what you know, eh?"

"What do you mean?"

"If Frenchy know where M'sieu was seen last, he trail him." Marion then told him all she knew of McLeod's movements and at her conclusion Frenchy said, "We soon fin' him, you bet." And then to Sir Herbert, "You thing Mam'selle look pretty with tear stains on her face, and those hollow eyes? Much better she rest, eh? Pretty soon M'sieu come to see best girl and only find second best, an' go 'way mad," and going out he left Sir Herbert with the first smile on his face that it carried for days while the color was rising in Marion's cheeks. Frenchy returned some three hours later. Marion saw him and ran to meet him. His squat figure seemed to assume gigantic poportions and then dwindle to that of a dwarf as he made his way to the house. The soaring flames behind him giving him an eric background.

"Oh Frenchy, have you found anything of him?" cried Marion.

"Non, Mam'selle, pretty soon Frenchy bring good news. First eat supper, then go see hospitals." Frenchy's buoyant spirits belied his own grief over his friend's unaccountable disappearance. Marion got him something to eat and during the meal he kept up a continual banter in order to cheer the girl, going out again immediately after, to continue his search.

Lemieux did the distance from Sydney in about fifteen hours, arriving just as Frenchy left the house. He immediately got to work. Gas masks were requisitioned from the government stores. The gas, which he called "X" for want of a name, was being made within a few hours of his arrival, and within twenty-four hours the first consignment was on its way to the field. Special police kept every one not on duty, far beyond the estimated danger zone. The firemen donned the gas masks, and with Lemieux commanding, the gas was played on the fire. Working on one of the reservoirs first, it was some time before Lemieux could discern any lessening wherever the gas settled, it created a blanket that smothered the fire. Intense cold was caused as the gas was released and this materially aided the firemen in their fight. Other tanks of gas arrived hourly, fresh men replaced tired ones and for the first time in days the fighters had hopes of success.

Frenchy, however, had made the rounds of the hospitals without success, he returned to Marion and was talking to her when the Radiophone rang and she left him to answer it. She came rushing back to him almost at once, "Frenchy, he has been taken to Alaska! A masked man has just told me."

"A masked man, Mam'selle?" said Frenchy, thinking the girl bereft.

"Yes, we don't know who he is except that he is a friend of Armand. He has warned him several times and says that Armand was taken to Alaska to a base and that "No. 2" has gone up there to kill him. Oh! what shall we do Frenchy, what can we do?"

"Mam'selle, Frenchy, he know where base is, he go. Need aeroplane quick."

"Oh Frenchy! do you think you can save him. I will get a plane at once and we'll go right away."

"Non, Mam'selle Frenchy go alone. Get M'sieu and bring him back. Mam'selle stay here an' get all ready eh?"

"W——ell! All right then Frenchy I'll get you a plane and a pilot." Marion ran off to do as she said. Herbert. He was drinking a cup of coffee when a knock at the door was heard and an oil-worker opened it and said that Miss Marion had said that the plane was waiting on the field. Frenchy went out after saying goodby to Sir Herbert and expected to see Marion at the plane. She was not in evidence. A pilot was seated behind the "joystick", and as soon as the half-breed was seated, they took off.

A brilliant moon was rising as they took the air, and the plane, circling once, sped northwards on its course. Fort Selkirk was reached in a little over seven hours and the pilot then changed the planes course westward and in a short time ran into a blinding snowstorm. The fragile craft was tossed about like a feather and all the skill of the pilot was required to keep it on its course. Many storms were encountered in this north country, but beyond retarding the speed nothing serious happened. Frenchy, brave enough on land and water, was none too sure of himself up in the air and from time to time wiped his goggles and looked over the side to see if he could get a glimpse of the land below, through the clouds. A sudden heavy squall enveloped the plane, and the pilot, despite strenuous efforts to maintain control, was forced down and with a splintering crash it heeled over on one wing and buried its nose in the snow. Frenchy was thrown clear but the pilot sat drooped over the joystick. The halfbreed picked himself up and went to the aid of his companion, dragging him to shelter beside the fusilage of the plane. The weather was bitterly cold and he pulled a flask of brandy from his pocket and taking a swallow himself forced some between the dazed pilots lips. After the plane had crashed, the storm, as if satisfied with what it had done, began to abate and soon after the night was again clear. Frenchy was busy building a snow wall to break the biting wind when he heard a voice say, "Oh Frenchy. What a terrible fix we are in now, however shall we go on?" He looked round with amazement, "You, Mam'selle, you are ze pilot?" He had not recognised Marion muffled up in her flying habit.

"Yes Frenchy, I had to come. My place is with Armand."

"But you, Mam'selle, you drive ze plane troo bad storms? Bon Dieu! Bon Dieu! You are ze one "Grand Voyageur."

"Oh that was nothing. I have been a pilot for years, but that is of no use now, the plane is ruined, what shall we do? We can't stay here, we shall freeze to death."

"Ah! Mam'selle is cold? Frenchy he no good, he forget.'" He at once took off his heavy coat and wrapped it around Marion's shoulders. She tried to stop him donig this, but though he had been remiss in thought he did not lack in will power so Marion gave up. "Pretty soon have fire going," he said. The plane had come down in a small clearing on the edge of which grew some stunted firs He made his way to these and soon came back with an armful of branches and in a short time had a roaring fire going. Marion stretched her hands out to the blaze gratefully. Frenchy then went to the plane and came back with the emergency kit and taking out some cubes of concentrated beef he made a broth in the lid of the kit. "Pretty soon ze sun come up and then we go fin'M'sieu."

"But how far are we away, Frenchy?"

"Maybe forty, fifty mile, tell when sun come."

"But we can't walk that distance in time."

"Over hill there," he pointed to the west, "Frenchy think there's a trapper live, maybe two, three mile, he keep dogs. Frenchy get dogs and "Hola" Mam'selle, she go like zat." he snapped his fingers.

"Frenchy, you are truly a friend in need. I don't know what I should have done without you. What is your real name?"

"Frenchy he got grand name. When he petit garcon, le mere she call him Batees Boulanger, but mos' all time call Frenchy."

"Baptiste, I like that name, I think I shall call you that."

"Merci. Mam'selle, Frenchy he much honor. Me, I go now see country from hill, back in maybe half hour, Mam'selle not 'fraid to stay by self?'

"Not now, Baptiste."

HOW MY WORLD WAGS

A poet has been calling at the domestic soup kitchen of Orilla, Ont., in an effort to trade his wares for sustaining nourishment. Soup to nuts.

At Dauphin, Man., an armed thug who robbed an elevator was sentenced to seven years and 20 lashes. Teach him to follow a more elevating life.

Dr. Hett of Kitchener, Ont. announces a new cancer cure, but is not ready to reveal what is is. So at present we mustn't get all het up over it.

"National League of Compulsory Education Officials hold convention in Toronto." Fine! Lots of officials need a little compulsory education.

"Your banks are in a healthy liquid position," Babson expert tells Canada. But the position of those who have imbibed a so-called healthy liquid is usually recumbent.

Owing to a lack of marriage license forms at Sudbury, Ont., several young couples, intending to wed, were held up for a day or two. Just a short and sweet reprieve before the troubles of married life begin.

Revenue agents in a Canadian Air Force aeroplane at Aylmer, Que., swooped down and seized 18 sacks of liquor about to be flown to the States Some poor millionaire across the border is going to have a miserably dry week end.

From the Pictou Advocate, N.S., of 25 years ago, we note the debating society decided we derive more pleasure in Canada from sports of winter than of summer. Of course, in those days, the long dreary months of summer had no beach pyjamas to brighten them a bit.

From the Inland Sentinel, Kamloop B.C., of 30 years ago, we learn that "the old tannery east of the cemetery burned down this morning." Well that's that. When we were small, dad used to threaten to tan us; and the tanyard in our juvenile mind, was the place of punishment. We're glad to have it confirmed that hell really did disappear along with the old theology

Canadian Tragedy

Little Mary had the mumps,
Face was two balloon-like lumps,
Willie jabbed them with a pick,
Just to see if they'd bust quick.
Mother said to little Willie:
"Didn't think you'd be so silly."

Totem Poles

Canada is rich in totem poles. Any of my visible readers from Nova Scotia who have run up to Prince Rupert, B.C., over Sunday will have noticed the enormous number for sale (often with "made in Japan" carefully erased.)

But it is in Jasper Park, Alta., where they may be studied in particular. Before doing so, two points may be born in mind. (1) That Florence Nightingale was known as "The Lady with the Lamp". (2)That moving pictures are called cinemas in England. These facts probably won't help us however.

Yet this much may be said; in that mysterious hour when the fireflies turn on their parking lights, and the bears sneak up to the hotel kitchen for a tasty snack of garbage, the totem poles of Jasper stand firm as ever. Yes, siree. You see, they are so big, you couldn't tote them away. Besides, you'd get pinched.

In Kitwanga village, B.C., the famous totem poles have a horrified look. And no wonder! When the porter on the train offers to wake you up at some unearthly hour to see the Indian village, you curtly refuse. But when you see the gang getting off the next morning, you hurriedly shove on your clothes back to front, and, with toupee awry, you rush after the others. And a whole lot of dishevelled passengers do likewise. No wonder the totem poles look frightened.

Indigestion Ballad

I've often drunk enamel
While riding on a camel.
I've sometimes swallowed noodles
While chasing light-green poodles.
And once I smashed a wagon
While hitching up a dragon.
With sword I've pierced the gizzard
Of fearsome giant lizards.
And charmed, like Hindoo pipers,
A thousand writhing vipers.
You see, it is my habit
At night, to eat Welsh rabbit.

WHAT CAR SALES MEAN TO CANADA

Automobile sales activity, indicated in a dramatic way by recent deliveries from the plant of General Motors of Canada, at Oshawa, Ontario, means a great deal more to Canada than appears on the surface. The cars turned out represent the made-in-Canada ideal which is set up and there is no province and scarcely a large city in the Dominion, which does not contribute material or services for the cars which go to the consumer from the production line at the Ontario plant. Sales activity in these cars, greater in this particular year because consumers are demanding Canadian-made goods, means millions spent throughout the Dominion. The expenditures of General Motors of Canada in the cities of the Dominion last year totalled over $19,000,000.

When money is plentiful you need Fire Insurance, but when it is scarce and it would be impossible for you to replace your home if fire destroyed it you need it much more, and it is one safeguard that costs very little and should be carried by everyone, especially in the fall of the year when the pipes rusted and clogged with soot, do not stand the heavy firing which the cold weather makes necessary and many fires are the result. Joe Welch will not only write your policy, but write it so that if you have a fire, his experience in the building and fire insurance business will be at your service and insure you a satisfactory adjustment.

MERCHANTS WILL GET GOV'T TRADE

EDMONTON—Retail merchants in Alberta will be given full opportunity for such business as may be involved in the distribution of relief supplies throughout the province during the coming winter, it is stated by Premier Brownlee. Local storekeepers will have a chance to tender on such supplies covering not only groceries, but footwear and clothing, and if their price is as good, or reasonably nearly as good, as can be got on the outside market, they will get the business.

The policy of the government in this respect will be the same as last year, says the premier, and has been so explained to a delegation from the Retail Merchants' Association.

FRUITS HORS D'OEUVRES

The fruit Hors d'Oeuvre or "first bite" is becoming more and more popular. Quite often a special decorative motif is carried out with these, at which time they are known as buffet rusts. Here are two suggestions for those who wish to feature these dainty little dishes.

Make a star of orange sections. Place cantaloupe or melon balls rolled in fine cocoanut or ground nuts between star points. Center with cherry

Make a star of orange sections. Make a second star of pineapple sections outside first star. Place at star points banana slices cut 1/4 inch thick and rolled in ground nuts, then dash with paprika. Put a mint sprig in center.

CANADIAN LEGION B. E. S. L.

The Annual Memorial Service will be held on Wednesday, November 11th. All ex-service men are requested to parade at the TOWN HALL at 10.45 A.M. (Medals and decorations to be worn.) A short service, two minutes silence will be held at the MEMORIAL TOWER, a wreath laid and the Last Post sounded in honour of fallen comrades followed by service in the Wainwright Theatre.

The annual general meeting will be held in the Oddfellows' Hall at 7.30 P.M., when Comrade G. L. Hudson will present his report on the Dominion Convention. A programme and dance will follow and all ex-soldiers and their wives or lady friends are cordially invited. Admission free.
